What is the Health Science Career Cluster?

Career clusters are groups of similar occupations and industries. They were developed by the U.S. Department of Education as a way to organize career planning.

Jobs in the health science career cluster involve planning, managing, and providing diagnostic, therapeutic, supportive, and information and research services in health care.

A career pathway is an area of concentration within a career cluster. The health science career cluster has five pathways: supportive services, information and communication services, diagnostic services, therapeutic services, and biotechnology and pharmaceutical services.
